Governor McMaster speaks at Financial Symposium at CCU

The South Carolina Financial Symposium was held at Coastal Carolina University, an event that Gov. Henry McMaster said is key because the economy is the core foundation for other components in today's society.

With more and more businesses calling the Palmetto State home, McMaster said it has helped the state get to where it is today. One key to keeping that going is focusing on technical schools, according to the governor.

“In order to take advantage of that, we need to be educated,” he said, “We need to be knowledgeable and the real key to it, besides just general brain power, is the technical college system and all it can do to provide the workforce for these magnificent factories and manufacturing places that are not like they used to be. Nobody carries tool boxes anymore. They all carry laptops and tablets.”

McMaster noted he wants to make sure the government doesn’t get in the way of economic prosperity, but help it grow more. He said he wants to try and get rid of some regulations that take too much time and serve no purpose. One of the examples he used was workers having to get permits.

“We have people working in South Carolina that are artisans, plumbers, HVAC, carpenters, all sorts of highly skilled workers that have to get multiple permits to do a job here or there that they spend half their time going around getting the different permits,” said McMaster, “That’s one of the regulations that we hear a lot of interest in, is streamlining that process so our people can work more quickly and not have to spend their time standing in line to get a permit.”

Another focus of his is lowering taxes. McMaster said he’s asked the legislature to cut taxes on everyone making money in the state by about 15 percent.

“The less you tax, the more people make money, the more people get jobs, the more people work. That ends up with more money actually going to the government to do those things that we need to do,” he said.

MBREDC Launches New Website

The MBREDC launched their new website on February 21st! This new design will assist the MBREDC in our marketing and recruitment efforts and would not have been possible without the support and leadership of the MBREDC Board, Marketing & Membership Committee, the Website Subcommittee, and all of the MBREDC members/investors that support the MBREDC and its mission.

The new design provides a variety of users with relevant and timely information, including available properties, incentives, MBREDC membership opportunities, news, and much more.

We encourage you to visit our new site and give us your feedback.

Horry County Government Announces Online Filing for Business License Renewals

Horry County Government announces a new online filing system for business license renewals. Business owners can now file and pay online for business license renewals. Businesses should receive a letter in the mail this week detailing the new system.

The new online system will be more efficient both for taxpayers and for the staff in the business license office. In addition, the new system will automatically calculate the amount due for each business type eliminating the opportunity for error. Businesses that file online will receive an immediate payment confirmation. Businesses should receive their license by May 1, 2018.

Business owners who have questions about filing for business license renewals and the online filing system can visit horrycounty.org (online services) or call the Business License office at (843) 915-5620.

Thank you to those that joined us!

We held our first ever Member-2-Member Speed Networking event on March 7th at the Ocean's Club Grande Dunes. There was a mix of various industries of 25 partners of the MBREDC that were able to join us. Each attendee got one-on-one direct networking with each other in this event. The direct feedback has been positive and encouraging that this style networking is something we will do again!

We thank you again to those that joined us and to our partner, the Grande Dunes for hosting our event.
